COMMENTS: Ford's latest lineup of sedans, particularly the 2017 Fusion Energi, look and feel more like European luxury cars than ever, but maintain a much more satisfying price tag and have MPG ratings and tech features that'll raise your eyebrows! This model comes with the 2.0L hybrid engine that gets up to 40 MPG in the city. The Titanium package leaves little to be desired with features like navigation, a touchscreen media interface, active cruise control, back-up camera with sonar park assist system, heated seats, remote start, blind spot monitor, Bluetooth, and a power moonroof. Last but not least, and probably the coolest feature of any car we have here- self parking. You can guess what that is.
